

SINCE ITS ORIGINAL APPEARANCE IN 1897, Chambers's Biographical Dictionary has been acknowledged as the reference volume in its field. Now, for the first time in 65 years, this monumental work has been brought completely up to date, totally rewritten, enlarged, and entirely reset in large, modern type. Comprising a veritable "Who's Who" of 3300 years of civilization, here—in 1397 double-columned pages—are 15,000 biographies, from Aristotle to Emile Zola, Alfred Adler to Hans Zinsser.

Presenting a uniform sequence of basic information for each entry—surname, Christian name, titles, pronunciation where necessary, dates, profession, birthplace, biographical data and bibliographical references—Chambers's Biographical Dictionary is more than a mere cataloguing of dates and miscellaneous facts. Throughout, the editors have attempted a measure of selection and assessment so that each entry affords insight into the true significance of a person's life, work and major contributions.

Further enhancing the value of this classic work is the unique "Subject Index"—34 pages in length and containing more than 6000 separate entries. Classified according to such fields as "Exploration and Geography," "Literature and Drama," "Science and Industry," "History," and "Philosophy and Theology," the invaluable Subject Index lists key works, discoveries, literary titles, nicknames etc., with cross-references to the appropriate text.

Available at a special Member's saving of more than 40% off the publisher's list price, here is an accurate, reliable, up-to-date treasury of information that deserves a place in every professional's working library.
